

Harper Perennial
 Carton Qty: 84
 Selling Territory: USOM
 25,000

On Sale: 1/19/2010

Fiction
 pb 9780061905902
 $13.99 (NCR)
 208 pages; 5 5/16 x 8

The Bird Room

A Novel

Chris Killen

A Harper Perennial Original

A dark, psychological tale of modern love and sex-as told by two very different, yet intertwining voices- from an explosive, promotable young author

"A postmodern world of troubled comic virtuality. . . . The Bird Room x-rays the souls of young...

With massive UK review attention and outstanding blurbs from fast-rising literary stars—from Tao Lin to Richard Milward—Chris Killen's The Bird Room is one of the hottest titles to emerge on the British literary scene this year. Perfectly melding "sex, melancholy, and killer one-liners" (Toby Litt), The Bird Room's spare prose and uncanny characters pull readers into a puzzle of emotion, lust, and obsession that quickly twists from dark comedy to wrenching drama and back again.

When Will, a painfully average introvert, meets Alice, he can't believe his luck. Alice brings meaning to his rote urban existence and his boring nine-to-five job. But the course of love never did run smooth, and soon devotion—and its uglier manifestations—lead Will to a dark place within himself. A love story with a twist, The Bird Room is sharp, playful, and brimming over with wicked comedy.

Marketing Campaign

Advertising

- Writer's Chronicle
- Literary Journals

Publicity

- National Print Features and Reviews
- National Radio Campaign

Marketing and Online•Advance Reader's Edition

- Online Outreach to Literary Websites and Blogs
- Videos Available
- Social Networking Outreach
- Author Website and Blog:

TheBirdRoom.org.uk.

DayofMoustaches.blogspot.com

Author Bio

Chris Killen was born in 1981. He is a Writing Fellow at the University of Manchester and keeps a popular blog, Day Of Moustaches (dayofmoustaches.blogspot.com.) He lives in Manchester, England, and The Bird Room is his first novel.